

Financial Resources for Fertility Preservation – Updated October 2025

New York State passed a law in 2020 requiring all insurers to provide coverage for IVF and fertility preservation, including medications. Despite the legislation, fertility preservation remains expensive, even if you have a supplemental fertility plan (e.g., Carrot, Progyny, Maven). Below, you'll find some resources for financial assistance to help defray the costs of sperm or egg freezing and storage.

Resources for Egg Retrieval/Storage

The Chick Mission

The Chick Mission is a non-profit organization that provides grants to young women with cancer who are looking to preserve their fertility. The Chick Mission offers grants to help cover the cost of egg freezing before treatment. They also offer a discount of 57% off the market rate for fertility preservation.

Eligibility:

- Annual income less than $150,000 (if single) or $200,000 (if married or in a partnership). You will need to supply proof of income for your application. Proof of income may be your most recent tax return.
- No prior chemotherapy or radiation/surgery to the reproductive organs
- Be between the ages of 18 and 40
- Be a resident of New York, California, Colorado, Florida, Montana, Oklahoma, Illinois, New Jersey, or Texas

Contact info:

- Email: hope@chickmission.org
- Website: <https://www.thechickmission.org/>

To qualify for this grant, you must be seen by a reproductive endocrinologist at one of the Chick Mission's partner clinics. In New York, those clinics are Columbia University, CCRM NY, Extend Fertility, NYU Langone, RMA NY (NYC, BK), and Shady Grove (NYC, BK). In New Jersey, partner clinics are IRMS and RMA.
